Twin Cities Housing Development Corporation Welcomes Amanda Novak as new Executive Director

[St. Paul, MN] – Twin Cities Housing Development Corporation (TCHDC) is thrilled to announce the appointment of Amanda Novak as its new Executive Director. Amanda will be succeeding Barb McQuillan, who is retiring in summer 2025.

Following an extensive nationwide search and months of careful evaluation, the TCHDC Board of Directors unanimously selected Amanda for her steady leadership, strategic expertise, and deep commitment to affordable housing. Amanda brings over 15 years of experience across the nonprofit, affordable housing, and finance sectors. She is recognized for her ability to align mission-driven strategies with financial sustainability, strengthen partnerships, and deliver high-quality, enduring housing solutions for families.

“I am honored to take on this role and build upon the strong foundation Barb and the team have created,” said Amanda Novak. “Preserving affordable housing is more critical than ever, and by working together with our partners, we can expand our impact and ensure thriving, inclusive communities for generations to come.”

The Board extends its deepest gratitude to Barb McQuillan for her leadership and dedication over the past 32 years. Under Barb’s guidance, TCHDC has developed a reputation for excellence and success within the affordable housing community, laying a strong foundation for the organization’s continued success. Her leadership was marked by a unique blend of visionary thinking and tactical precision, creating a solid foundation for TCHDC’s future endeavors.

About Twin Cities Housing Development Corporation

Twin Cities Housing Development Corporation, a nonprofit developer incorporated in 1984, has built or renovated over 2,940 units of housing in the Twin Cities. In our work to create and sustain safe, quality and affordable housing, TCHDC values the diverse fabric of the communities we serve and strives to be inclusive in all that we do.

From efficiency apartments in the City of Minneapolis, to family townhomes in Owatonna, our developments are designed to complement their communities, to provide our residents with excellent, well-managed housing, and to build value for our investors. Our developments have won Committee for Urban Excellence awards and have been cited by the Heritage Preservation Commission of the City of Saint Paul.
